CONTINUE OUR LEGACY FOR THE NEXT 350 YEARS & BEYOND

The Royal Botanic Garden Edinburgh is a registered charity whose work would not be possible without the generous donations of our supporters. Planned legacy giving supports our wide-ranging activity, including:

- Global conservation work in the face of a biodiversity crisis
- Inspiring horticulture to develop the living collection
- Community outreach, fostering wellbeing in vulnerable people
- Educational programmes, inspiring the next generation of researchers and horticulturists
- Art programmes that offer audiences creative ways to explore the natural world

A gift in your Will helps us to protect our natural world and nurture future generations.

NURTURING OUR COMMUNITY

There is growing evidence that regular exercise and physical activity can help aid recovery and prevent recurrence of cancer. This fits well with gardening activities at the Botanic Garden such as the Edible Gardening Project and work in the Demonstration Garden.

Our Move More group, a Macmillan Cancer Support and Edinburgh Leisure Centre Initiative, has been working with us for three years, and meets every Wednesday to care for their own plot; from preparing the soil, sowing seeds, and caring for plants, to harvesting food.
